Administrative/Biographical Note

John O'Donnell (1749-1805), son of John and Deborah O'Donnell of Ireland, was a merchant and ship captain for the British East India Company (1,2,3). When O'Donnell arrived in Baltimore's harbor in 1785, he named his land along the harbor "Canton" after the Chinese port city now called Guangzhou (4). Canton remains an active harbor industrial and residential neighborhood in Baltimore, with O'Donnell Square and O'Donnell Street running through its center.

John O'Donnell married Sarah Chew Elliott (1768-1855), daughter of Captain Thomas Elliott of Fell's Point, in 1785 (5,6). Before John's death in 1805, he and Sarah had 7 children: Mary (b. 1790), Columbus (1792-1873), Deborah (b. 1794), John (b. 1796), Elliott (1798-1836), Eliza White (b. 1800), and Henry (b. 1791) (7). General Columbus O'Donnell, the eldest son, fought in the Battle of North Point during the War of 1812 (8). He served several prominent positions throughout Baltimore, including with the B& O Railroad, Union Bank of Maryland, First National Bank of Maryland, the Baltimore Water Company, and the Baltimore Gas Light company; he was also an original partner of the Canton Company of Baltimore (9,10).

John O'Donnell's fifth child, son Elliott, was the only descendent to return to his father's homeland of Ireland, to study at Trinity College. Prior to his mysterious death in 1836, Elliott married Sarah Vize (d. 1870) (11). Sarah Vize had 8 children, at least one of which was with her second husband: John Vize (d. 1919), Elliott, Henry (d. 1873), Sarah Marie, Harriet (d. 1874), Elizabeth, Eleanora, and Robert Edmund (1842-1897) (12,13). Son Henry also attended Trinity College, and it is his son Elliott (1872-1965) that compiled this manuscript collection.

Series

- I. Columbus O'Donnell correspondence
- II. Charles Oliver O'Donnell correspondence
- III. Henry O'Donnell papers
- IV. John O'Donnell and Sarah Chew Elliott O'Donnell collection
- V. Miscellaneous

Note

The O'Donnell family papers, 1831-1932, are primarily composed of correspondence written to or from the descendants of John O'Donnell (1749-1805) and his wife Sarah Chew Elliott O'Donnell (b. 1768). The O'Donnells were a prominent and wealthy family in Baltimore, beginning with John O'Donnell's founding of the neighborhood and industrial area of Canton in 1785. Original materials created by John and Sarah O'Donnell are not available in this collection.

The O'Donnell family frequently named descendants after relatives; care should be taken to determine the correct person referenced within this collection, especially when referencing people by the name of John, Sarah, Mary, Columbus, Elliott, and Henry.

Series I, Columbus O'Donnell correspondence, 1831-1868, contains correspondence written by John O'Donnell's oldest son, Columbus (1792-1873). Columbus writes of his life, his health, and the finances of the O'Donnell family. As the bulk of the correspondence was written during the Civil War, passing references to the events of Baltimore and area troops are often included. Columbus's main correspondent is Henry O'Donnell, son of his brother Elliott, and his sister-in-law Sarah Vize O'Donnell, mother of Henry. During processing, a letter written by Sarah Vize O'Donnell to her son Henry O'Donnell was located interfiled with Columbus's correspondence and moved to Series III, Henry O'Donnell papers.

Series II is composed of three letters written by Charles Oliver O'Donnell, son of Columbus. His correspondents are also Henry O'Donnell - his cousin - and Henry's mother Sarah, who is Charles Oliver's aunt. Topics covered include finances and the Civil War. Charles Oliver appears to have been a supporter of the Confederate Army, in contrast to his father Columbus, an ardent supporter of the Union.

The third series, Henry O'Donnell papers, contains correspondence and journals written by Henry O'Donnell (d. 1873). Four journals detail Henry's trip to America in 1870; the entries include his thoughts, sketches, drawn maps, and some descriptions of his time travelling by sea, in Baltimore, and in Washington, D.C. The journals date from July 12 to September 3, 1870. Four letters to his "darling wife," Elizabeth Sarah Mousley O'Donnell, detail his time in Baltimore and his efforts to negotiate his inheritance, or "legacy", from his uncle Columbus. Finally, a letter to his mother Sarah further details his financial negotiations with his uncle, although this letter appears to be from much earlier and during the Civil War. Columbus O'Donnell's will, available at the Maryland Historical Society, indicates that Henry and his brother John Vize received their inheritance prior to January 1872.

Series IV, John O'Donnell and Sarah Chew Elliott O'Donnell collection, 1932-1935 and undated, contains biographical information relating directly to John and Sarah but does not contain materials created by their hand. Several biographical essays and family trees are included, as well as three photographs of portraits (painted by Charles Willson Peale, and exhibited in the National Gallery of Art in 1925): one of Sarah Chew Elliott O'Donnell, one of her mother Mary Chew, and one of Sarah's daughter, Mary O'Donnell (b. 1790).

The fifth and final series contains single items relating to several O'Donnell descendants. A letter to Elliott O'Donnell (1872-1965) from his cousin Columbus O'Donnell Iselin, grandson of Columbus O'Donnell, includes discussion of the O'Donnell family and John O'Donnell. Also included is a statement of personal property for Elliott O'Donnell (b. 1798), son of John O'Donnell and grandfather of Elliott O'Donnell. And finally, there is a letter to Henry O'Donnell from cousin Lizzie Poor; the letter is undated and it is unclear which Henry is the recipient. Columbus O'Donnell's sister Deborah (b. 1794) married Dudley Poor, but no descendants are listed on available family trees.

Provenance Information

Provenance and Acquisition Information

This collection was purchased from Richard M. Ford, Ltd (London) with funds provided by the Friends of the Library in 2012. The collection was originally property of Elliott O'Donnell (1872-1965), great-grandson of John and Sarah O'Donnell. Related materials from Elliott O'Donnell were donated to the Maryland Historical Society prior to his death in 1965.

Processing Note

The papers had previously been separated into 5 divisions and those divisions were maintained during processing. The five series in the processed collection reflect this prior arrangement. The collection was processed and a finding aid written in 2012 by Archivist Lindsey Loeper with research and rehousing assistance provided by student assistant Steve Ammidown. During processing, a letter not listed on the dealer prospectus sheet was located in an envelope within the Columbus O'Donnell correspondence (Series I). It was determined that this letter was written by Sarah Vize O'Donnell (d. 1870) to her son Henry O'Donnell (d. 1875); Sarah was the widow of Columbus O'Donnell's brother Elliott. This letter was moved to Series III, Henry O'Donnell papers.
