Note

The Society for Invertebrate Pathology (SIP), founded in 1967, is a group for students, researchers, and scientists around the world who study diseases in invertebrate species. Their records span from 1954 to 2012, and are 5.75 linear feet. The records are divided into five series: I. Council, II. Publications, III. Members, IV. Photographs, and V. Audiovisual.

Council Records (Series I) are divided into two sub-series: A. Meeting Proceedings and B. Establishing documents. The meeting proceedings contain minutes from the SIP's first and second business meetings (1968-1970). The establishing documents contain drafts and final editions of the SIP Constitution and Bylaws written by Mauro Martignoni in 1981-1982.

Series II is the largest series in the collection. The publications are divided by type into four sub-series: A. Newsletters, B. Meeting programs and abstracts, C. Directories, and D. Education. The newsletters span 1968-2012, and include scanned copies of volumes 1 through 31. The meeting programs and abstracts are predominately from SIP meetings but also include meetings held in conjunction with the SIP: the American Institute of Biological Sciences and the International Congress of Invertebrate Pathology. Directories are published by the SIP or affiliated organizations for scientist engaged in related fields. Membership directories are located in Series III. Educational publications include glossaries, course listings, and laboratory exercises.

Member records (Series III) span from 1967 to 2012 and are divided into five sub-series: A. Directories, B. Honorary Members, C. Mauro Martignoni, D. Jaroslav Weiser, and E. Edward Steinhaus. This series contains directories published by the SIP for society members, biographical data, curriculum vitae, papers, and correspondence of SIP members. The correspondence from sub-series B is between Elizabeth Davidson and honorary members of the SIP. The Martignoni records include his correspondence with Davidson and his own papers. Included with the Martignoni papers is a biographical book on Edward Steinhaus (1970). Weiser records include his correspondence with Elizabeth Davidson. Steinhaus records include scanned correspondence, dated 1963-1971, between Dr. Edward Steinhaus, Mabry Steinhaus, and Dr. John Briggs. The correspondence also includes photographs of Ohio State University and Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center faculty from 1966.

The photographs (Series IV) are not divided into sub-series. They span from 1954 to 2012. The SIP photographs are of annual meetings, lectures, members, laboratories, and affiliated institutions or organizations. Other institutions include laboratories in Germany and Prague, the Laboratory of Insect Pathology at Berkeley, and the Glasshouse Institute. This series includes prints, slides (most likely from member John Briggs), and scanned copies on CDs. Some CDs with photographs also include seminar material and scanned documents. Scanned documents include correspondence of Mauro Martignoni, Edward Steinhaus, and John Briggs, SIP newsletter obituaries, and material for a talk on Edward Steinhaus.

Series V includes audiovisual material. This series is divided into three sub-series: A. Presentations, and B. Interviews, and C. Correspondence. Sub-series V.A includes presentation slides and word documents for various pathology lectures and meetings.

Sub-series V.B contains five discs of audio interviews. There are five interviewees: Thomas Angus, Wayne Brooks, Albert Sparks and Phyllis Johnson, and Yoshinori Tanada. Interviews cover the interviewee's research, contributions to the SIP, and their work with Edward Steinhaus. Interviews were conducted as research for a biography on Edward Steinhaus. Some audio is hard to decipher due to a problem with the recording device, including interviews with Brooks and Tanada.
